Fire Discovered at Midnight
After Smouldering
For Hours

DRILL SMOKE HOLES

Building Itself Was Not In Danger; Is of Fireproof
Construction

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—After eight and a half hours of strenuous activity, firemen stopped pouring water into a sixth floor fire room of the new $10,000,000 postoffice building here today. While firemen removed their hose and equipment, postoffice employees started cleaning up the debris and drawing off the water which collected in the section of the building containing the fire room.

The fire was first discovered at midnight in a narrow 200-foot room, semi-circular room used to store various government files. The room has no outside windows. The only entrances come off an inside corridor.

Firemen found this room filled with smoke, but could not find the source of the smoke. More than a score were overcome. Fifteen are still in hospitals, others were treated in ambulances and sent home.

With the help of all the firemen in the city, it was brought under control. Fire officials explained the difficulty came from lack of ventilation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(INS)—The Government's magnificent new $10,000,000 Post Office Department building on Pennsylvania avenue was a sore sight today with tons of water pouring down its stairways and elevator shafts and through its corridors and smoke belching from a series of file rooms on the sixth floor.

The fire, discovered at midnight, after having been smouldering for hours before discovery, was still burning at 6 a. m. today. The building itself was in no danger because of its fire-proof construction.

The section in which the flames are crackling is almost inaccessible for fire hose because of the building's peculiar construction.

Before daybreak firemen were cutting huge holes in the concrete flooring of the seventh floor with air compressor drills so the smoke could escape and firemen could direct streams of water into the burning interior.

The fire was discovered by Watchman Oliver Katts. He and two other men fought the fire with the building's fire hose for 25 minutes before they saw their efforts futile and called the city fire department.

Shortly after a general alarm was sounded bringing every engine company in the district, except one, to the scene. Volunteer companies from nearby Maryland and Virginia were brought here to "cover" the capital while the local engines were at the fire.

All told 800 firemen were mustered into service.

The smoke that poured from the costly structure was so dense that between 50 and 60 firemen who were not equipped with gas masks were overcome. Several were in hospitals in a serious condition.

Fire Marshal Calvin Lauber said a thorough investigation will be made by his office to determine the cause of the fire.

"There is a chance that the fire might have been of incendiary origin," he said.

CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT

"No single branch or department of the Government has exclusive authority to speak for the American people.

"The most authentic and solemn expression of their will is contained in the Constitution of the United States.

"By that Constitution they have ordained and established a Government whose powers are distributed among co-ordinate branches, which, as far as possible, consistently with a harmonious co-operation, are absolutely independent of each other."

Riding Club Donates $100 To Fund for Underprivileged

Announcement was made by Dr. J. Fred Wagner, president of the Bristol Riding Club, that members contributed the sum of $100 to the fund for underprivileged children at their final business meeting of the year, held this week.

"The fund for this worthy cause is entirely the result of the liberal support which the community has given the club activities," said Dr. Wagner. "For this loyalty the club members are sincerely appreciative."

The underprivileged children's fund is dispensed by past presidents of the Rotary Club and is for the purpose of purchasing eye glasses for children who cannot afford to buy them.

ROOSEVELT PREDICTED INDUSTRIAL CHAOS

Told of What Might Happen
If the N. R. A. Was Discontinued

IT RETARDED RECOVERY

(Article III of Series "Has the New Deal Contributed Anything Toward Recovery?")

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Landing at Charleston, S. C., October 23 this year, at the close of his first 1936 presidential campaign tour, which took him across the country to San Diego and back through the Panama Canal, President Roosevelt stated that his trip across the United States had convinced him that the country was "coming back." Continuing, he said: "Yes, we are on the way back—not by mere chance, not by a turn of the cycle. We are coming back more soundly than ever before because we planned it that way, and don't let anybody tell you differently."

In order to check on the President's statement, let us quote from his message to Congress, February 20, 1935, asking for an extension of the National Industrial Recovery Act. He stated then that it was absolutely essential to the welfare of the country that the National Industrial Recovery Act be continued because it contained principles and purposes which were indispensable to the country's welfare. He said:

"To abandon them is unthinkable. It would spell the return of industrial and labor chaos. I, therefore, recommend to the Congress that the National Industrial Recovery Act be extended for a period of two years."

That was what the Administration planned.

The Supreme Court, on May 27, interfered with its plans by declaring the National Industrial Recovery Act unconstitutional. Instantly the codes, over 600 in number, became inoperative. Industry and business ceased being dictated to by bureaucracy. Insofar as the N. I. R. A. was concerned, the government was taken out of business.

The entire Administration instantly echoed the statement the President made in his message, that there would be "industrial and labor chaos." Moreover, they really believed it. The entire "New Deal" had been practicing self-hypnotism so long that its fears regarding the effect of the Supreme Court's decision on the N. R. A. were not imaginary.

The decision of the Supreme Court was made on Monday, May 27.

The head of the New York Times Washington Bureau, Arthur Krock, drew a pitiful picture of the effect of the Supreme Court's decision upon the legal staff of the government.

"Government attorneys had been optimistic about the Schechter case, and to them the decision was a bombshell. Donald Richberg and Solicitor General Reed, who had defended the N. I. R. A., left the room with downcast faces. The Attorney General in his office stopped chewing a ham sandwich."

The heart bowed down with grief and woe.

The President immediately sent for Prof. Felix Frankfurter, whom General Johnson has described as being the most influential citizen in the United States insofar as this Administration is concerned. The entire brood of radical and semi-radical advisers which swarm the executive offices of this country are devoted followers of Professor Frankfurter. The N. I. R. A. was generally accredited to be the product of Professor Frankfurter.

The President was in conference with Frankfurter at various intervals for two days. He also called in General Johnson, Donald Richberg, at that time the Administrator of the N. R. A., his legal staff, and his "Brain Trust" advisers. They attempted to devise a new N. R. A.—but without success.

OPPRESSIVE AUTOMOBILE TAXES

(Saturday Evening Post, December 7, 1935)

More than five million persons, or about one-eighth of those gainfully employed, get their living, directly or indirectly, out of the automobile business; and last year average hourly wage rates were higher than those paid at the peak of prosperity, early in 1929. This year, wages have been rising even from these high levels. More than a million of our fellow citizens are engaged in selling or servicing our automobiles, and we buy from them between four and five billion dollars' worth a year, with bright prospects of exceeding the latter figure in 1936.

Last year we made nearly three million motor vehicles, and these figures, large as they are, may seem moderate when those for 1935 become available. Even now we have 8.1 motorcars for each mile of highway, and our registrations of motor vehicles run around twenty-five million out of a world total of thirty-five million.

These figures indicate the magnitude of the industry, but they do not reveal the expenditures for services that the automobile requires. Cars would be useless without roads on which to run them. The highway mileage of the world is in the neighborhood of nine million, and one-third of this is in the United States, where nearly a million and a half of us are engaged in state or Federal road employment.

Despite the fact that the net price of gasoline has been steadily declining for the past fifteen years, our average annual bill for this fuel is about seventy-four dollars, for, as basic costs have gone down, taxes have risen until about one-third of the fuel bill is attributable to them.

The automobile, today, is severely and unjustly taxed, gouged and chiseled. These burdensome taxes, originally imposed on the ground that they were fair and necessary because they were to pay for the wear and tear of motorcars on our highways, have been in part diverted from that use into dozens of other channels in no way connected with transportation of any sort. In fifteen years these taxes have been multiplied sixfold. Last year they ran well over a billion dollars, and next year they will almost certainly exceed a billion and a quarter. At the present time we are paying considerably more than half a billion for state gasoline taxes, nearly one-third of a billion for state registration fees and more than a quarter of a billion for Federal excise taxes.

Despite the fact that more than twenty states have reduced license fees within the past year or two, statisticians tell us that the motorist, as such, pays one dollar out of every eight collected by governmental agencies. The tax on the individual car runs to considerably more than thirty dollars a year. The petroleum industry alone is paying well over a billion a year in taxes, a considerable proportion of which is passed on to users of the automobile.

There is no rational defense for this excessive taxation, and the only excuse is that it is easy to collect. Organizations which are fighting for a reduction of these taxes should have general support.

MOVE FOR HAUPTMANN'S SECOND DEATH SENTENCE

Several Developments Stand
Out in the Re-Opened
"Crime of Century"

THESE ARE RECOUNTED FUNERAL ON MONDAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(INS)—While the State of New Jersey moved rapidly today to have Bruno Richard Hauptmann sentenced to the electric chair for the second—and probably last—time, these developments stood out in the re-opened "crime of the century."

1. The records in the United States Supreme Court's refusal to try the case of the convicted killer of the Lindbergh baby have reached the office of Attorney General Wilentz and a new date for Hauptmann's execution will be set by Justice Thomas Trenchard, the trial judge, not later than Monday.

2. Governor Harold Hoffman and New Jersey legislative heads were to hold a conference in Trenton today at which the executive was expected to invite the Legislature to conduct a probe to determine whether his activities in the Lindbergh case were inspired by political motives, as has been charged.

3. Ellis Parker, famous Burlington county detective, who has asserted his belief in Hauptmann's innocence, emphatically denied published reports he has paid six midnight visits to Hauptmann's cell in the death house. "The fellow that got that story must have been a sleight-of-hand artist," Parker said.

4. C. Lloyd Fisher, Hauptmann's chief of defense, announced he had found a new witness, who is reported to have said Isidor Fisch, dead German furrier, had $50,000 in "hot money," shortly after the kidnapping in March, 1932.

5. Governor Hoffman denied reports threatening letters had been sent to him or that he has a bodyguard. He admitted, however, that a number of abusive letters have been sent to him since he announced he had visited Hauptmann in his cell.

6. Dr. John F. Condon, who has been making a secret hunt for new evidence against Hauptmann in case a new trial is granted him, visited Abraham Samuelson, Bronx cabinet maker, who has asserted he made the kidnap ladder for Hauptmann.

7. Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey State Police, denied knowledge of the reported arrest as a material witness in the Lindbergh case in Dallas, Texas, of Joseph Schay, 31-year-old bookkeeper.

8. At Atlantic City, former State Senator Emerson Richards described Governor Hoffman's activities in the case as "political ballyhoo."

DROP ALL CHARGES IN ABDUCTION OF CHILD

Family Kiss and Forgive Each
Other After Hearing
Is Held

PROSECUTION CEASES

After general kissing and forgiveness on the part of all, Mary White, 24, 1711 S. Lee street, Philadelphia, was discharged from police custody and all charges in connection with the abduction of her six-year-old daughter were dropped, last night.

The woman's sister, Mrs. Antoinette Lord acted as the peacemaker and with tears in her eyes and amid sobs which shook her body, she pleaded with Mrs. Katherine Pearson, Bristol Township, and her son, Oscar White, not to let her sister go back to jail.

"You're my brother-in-law. I've got five and you have only one. Can't you do something for me?" audibly sobbed Mrs. Lord as she hugged Oscar White, father of the child abducted from his mother in whose keeping the youngster had been for four years.

Mrs. Lord made her plea to Mrs. Pearson as well, whom she fondly kissed and embraced. "Yes, but look what Mary done to me," was Mrs. Pearson's answer.

"I have no money but I'll pawn my clothes before I'll let my sister go back to jail," exclaimed the distracted Mrs. Lord.

Mary White, 24, and Barbara Puidok, 28, 602 N. 7th street, Philadelphia, came before Justice of Peace James Laughlin, last night, in the Municipal Building, for a further hearing on the charges of assault and battery, aggravated assault and battery, abduction and attempt to kill. It was announced as the hearing got under way that the charges of abduction and attempt to kill had been dropped.

Mrs. Pearson was the first to testify and described in detail how her daughter-in-law came to her home on December 4th accompanied by Barbara Puidok. Then according to the witness there ensued an argument over the child. Mrs. Pearson said she was attacked by Mrs. White who tore her clothing, pulled out a lot of her hair and struck her. The garments were exhibited as well as the strands of hair.

Mrs. White denied all of the allegations and said she went to get her child who was not receiving the proper care. She told Judge Laughlin that when she entered the Pearson home she kissed her mother-in-law and the child. "I didn't see any wrong in going and taking my own child."

Detective Anthony Russo told of the arrest of the two women and of how Mrs. White protested her arrest and flaunted the law and told the officers that they could not take her.

Mrs. Pearson testified that Miss Puidok did not touch her.

Oscar White, father of the child, came from Reading, to attend the hearing and stood in the back of the court room. He was not called to the stand.

Barbara Puidok was discharged upon the payment of costs when she told Justice Laughlin that she came up here as a friend of Mrs. White not knowing what she was getting into. She drove Mrs. White here in her brother's car.

Mary White was held in $500 for court and it was at this point that Mrs. Lord made her successful plea to all parties concerned. The entire group went to the office of Detective Russo where Mrs. White apologized to Mrs. Pearson and the two embraced and kissed. Mrs. White and her husband from whom she has been estranged for five years, went into private conference in the detention room. It was stated that they were going to be friendly but that they did not intend to live together.

The child went home in the custody of her grandmother and apparently was happy.

Mrs. White was told that if she wanted to get possession of her child there was a peaceful way of going about it. She was discharged upon the payment of costs.

Five More Hunters Killed

Harrisburg, Dec. 13.—Five more lives have been added to the toll of hunting fatalities in Pennsylvania today during the first day of the state's "short season" on antlerless deer. In Pike County, it was estimated that from 2,000 to 3,000 does were shot by approximately 20,000 hunters who invaded that section. Several hunters were arrested for killing does in advance of the "season" and hiding the carcasses in the woods until yesterday.

Selassie Rejects Peace Plan

Geneva, Dec. 13.—Emperor Haile Selassie today rejected the Hoare-Laval peace plan in a note to the League of Nations.

The note was not published immediately, but it was understood the Emperor refused to cede any Ethiopian territory.

The Emperor, it was understood, pointed out that the plan "did not come from the League," and demanded convocation of the League's assembly to disbar the crisis.

Premier Laval of France and Anthony Eden of Great Britain conferred hastily to determine a course of procedure.

The rejected plan is widely reported to provide that Ethiopia make a large territorial cession to Italy.

Ethiopians say it provides the Emperor "cede one half of his territory to the Italians and the other half to the League."

Premier Mussolini has a basis for discussion. Il Duce was believed likely to demand even further concessions than those provided for.

Thus developments indicated the plan was dying fast. The British themselves, egged on by a great revolt at home, virtually disowned the proposals. Officially they have stressed that the plan agreed upon by Laval and Hoare, British Foreign Secretary, was a League venture, and not an Anglo-French one.

PEACETIME TOYS REPLACE THOSE OF WAR-LIKE KIND

Streamline Trains and Electrical Toys Are Among The Leaders

REPORT HEAVY BUYING

Streamlined trains with real whistles, Dionne quintuplet dolls and workable mechanical equipment have displaced miniature machine guns and war games in popularity with children this year, a survey of the Christmas toylands in the stores shows.

Retail merchants in many cities report heaviest buying in toys that reflect the peaceful pursuits of the adult world. Newest among the toy attractions is a movie projector, ready to throw a talking Mickey Mouse cartoon on a small screen. It costs 98 cents.

A steel loom that Johnnie or Mary can use to make real rugs is another innovation. Even a five-year-old may operate it successfully and produce ties, scarfs or other goods. Cement mixers, low-priced typewriters with upper and lower case letters, an electric stove that will actually roast a small chicken, midget mangles, washing machines and vacuum cleaners that work by electricity are other new attractions.

You can get a fire engine that has a real siren and will make any Christmas a noisy one; streamlined roller skates; velocipedes with balloon tires; doll houses with electric lights and a radio, and toy pianos that can't get out of tune.

Wonder of wonders among the new thrills are the toy makers' adaptations of the photo-electric cell principle.

There's an "electric eye" for playroom use that makes it possible to silence a radio with a flash light and to light an electric light by lighting a match.

And in the educational field there are bigger and better chemistry, microscopic, astronomical, magic and construction sets.

Not only the toy sellers, but merchants generally report the best Christmas buying since 1930, much of it stimulated by seasonable cold weather.

Retail sales of men's and women's heavy-weight apparel jumped during the cold wave enough to offset losses during November, it was reported. When balmy winds and high temperatures arrive instead of expected winter weather, merchants pointed out, Mr. and Mrs. Public postpone purchasing warmer clothing.

NEWPORTVILLE MAN GOES TO JAIL FOR THEFT IN BRISTOL

Albert Barnhard Took Two Pairs of Trousers From Breier Store, Here

WAS ON PAROLE

Parole Granted Trenton Man
After Serving Six Months of Sentence

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 13.—Charged with the theft of two pairs of trousers, Albert Barnhard, Newportville, pleaded guilty. The trousers were stolen from the store of B. Breier, Bath and Otter streets, Bristol, on the evening of November 25th. Barnhard told the Court that he had imbibed in a quart of liquor before the theft.

Barnhard told the Court that this is his "third trip" to Court.

The defendant was recommitted to the Bucks County Prison to serve the unexpired term of his parole after which he will again appear before the court to be sentenced for the theft at the Breier store. He has two years and six months to serve.

The last of the business to come before the December term of criminal court of Bucks county was transacted yesterday, when several defendants pleaded guilty.

The Grand Jury was excused at 11.30 by the Court, for the term.

The Perkasis Trust Company was appointed guardian of the estate of Mabel Linn, a patient at the Norris-town State Hospital. Dr. Lella Ridout, assistant physician at the hospital, testified as to the condition of Mabel Linn.

Charged with the theft of an automobile belonging to Harrison Hibbard, Doylestown, on Nov. 14, Joseph Friedman, 17, of Cleveland, pleaded guilty before Judges Hiram H. Keller and Calvin S. Boyer.

Chief of Police James Welsh testified that Friedman was arrested in Georgia and brought back to Doylestown last week. The car was sold in Georgia by Chief Welsh, for $50 by direction of the owner of the car. Hibbard fixed the value of the car at $200. On the trip South, the car overturned five times going down a steep hill.

Friedman, a student at a Bucks county school, testified that he worked his way South doing odd jobs. He told the Court he "wanted a change because he thought he was not doing as well in school as he thought he should."

Friedman said that he never really thought of the seriousness of the crime that he committed until he reached Georgia.

Judge Keller suspended sentence on condition that costs be paid and the owner of the car be reimbursed for any damages, and that Friedman be released on three years' probation in the custody of a cousin, Lewis Struhl, a well known member of the Jersey City Bar.

Friedman thanked the Court and assured them that he will demonstrate to them that he is worthy of the consideration shown him.

George Sunday, of Trenton, who was sentenced to one to three years in the Bucks County Prison on a charge of involuntary manslaughter and failing to stop and render assistance, and who has served about six months of the sentence, applied for a parole today, stating that he has a job waiting for him and that his family is in dire circumstances and on relief in New Jersey. The relief has been cut off because Sunday has been in jail. The Court granted the parole.

SHOP NOW

The Christmas shopping rush is on. It will intensify until Christmas is here.

Shop early—early in the month; early in the week; early in the day.

That program is best for everyone. It pleases those who have goods to sell, for it distributes their trade so that they better can serve their customers.

It is to the interest of the shopper because he finds stocks in better assortment and condition and gets better help from store employees.

And it is a mercy to sales people who must stand the stress and strain that comes with last minute rushes.

Probably more than half of those who usually through the stores during the last few shopping days could as well make their Christmas purchases now. A little planning; a little initiative; a little consideration for one's own welfare and interests and for the convenience of others, will help greatly in conserving the joyousness of the holiday period.

SUPERSTITION

Dr. James H. Breasted has succumbed to Asiatic cholera, and of course the report is circulated that since he had something to do with the tomb of King Tutankhamen, the curse of the Pharaoh got him. Inasmuch as the tomb was opened more than 12 years ago, it looks as if the curse has become rather attenuated. Why has it held off all this time? Couldn't it find Dr. Breasted? And having located him, why did it choose cholera rather than some more picturesque and sudden penalty?

Any good self-respecting curse in fair working order would have begun ere this on Howard Carter, who had a hundred times more to do with digging up King Tut than Dr. Breasted. But Mr. Carter must carry a buckeye in his pocket, or wear a sack of asafetida around his neck.

But when the last digger in the Carter expedition dies at the ripe age of 94, he will still have been killed by the curse, mark our words.

DRIVE AND WALK CAREFULLY

"Pedestrian accidents always multiply with the approach of Christmas," warns the Michigan Safety Council. The appeal to Christmas shoppers to be careful is timely and is prompted by experience of other years.

It is a time for everyone to exercise great caution. Those who drive must keep in mind that winter driving conditions are bad and that streets thronged with people with an unusual percentage of children involve terrifying hazards. A single accident can rob Christmas of much of its gladness.

Heed the warning of the Safety Council. Drive carefully; walk carefully. When in the streets, be mindful of danger. The instructions of the council to pedestrians are:

"Walk briskly from curb to curb with the traffic signal. Suspend conversation with accompanying friends until the opposite curb is reached."

Suggested subtitle for any news reel shot of marching men: "Who pays for all this?"

Does anyone remember now whether the new annual models in horses came out in October or January?

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — In case you've been worrying—and I suppose we might as well worry about this as anything else, considering all the good that worry does—big sleeves are definitely here to stay.

Ever since these big sleeves "came in," three years ago, some designers have been trying to get them out again. Instead, each winter the good old big sleeves seem to bounce right back again in a new version.

This year has brought us the Bishop's sleeve . . . fullness at the bottom gathered into a band . . . Also various sizes of the leg-o-mutton . . .

and others with small puffs and a long cuff.

Recently I did a black velvet dinner dress with a long fish tail train for Mrs. Buster Collier . . . a puff above the elbow was covered with a rhinestone motif, and the flared, knee length coat had wide sleeves with a cuff.

In "Prison Farm," Kay Linaker will wear a one-piece dress of dark green velvet, trimmed with large bronze buttons carved like lilies centered in emeralds . . . sleeves being long, wide, and finished with cuff-link-like buttons.

On evening gowns, little jackets are worn that are little more than enormous, draped sleeves, caught together across the shoulders. Joan Blondell has one in "Colleen," and in the same picture, Ruby Keeler wears a frock of black and white checked taffeta, with full skirt, peplum edged with pleating, and quaint sleeves set off by white organdie epaulets wide over the shoulders.

New among daytime sleeves are drapes, somewhere between the shoulder and elbow, in a swirl that gives a dropped shoulder line and width to the bodice that results in a slender effect for the hips. Belled sleeves are still good, and so are the three-quarter sleeves, most often caught up into some kind of drape below the elbow.

Along with all this fuss, it must be pointed out, the plain sleeve is still liked, and will probably always have its place in the style limelight.

But definitely, the big sleeve is here to stay.

TULLYTOWN

Mrs. David Lyndall, Trenton, N. J., has returned home after spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carlen. The annual Christmas entertainment to be given under auspices of Tullytown M. E. Sunday School will be held on Thursday evening.

"WIFE IN CUSTODY" by BEATRICE LUBITZ

CHAPTER XXVII

In the weeks that followed, Helen pondered over Dirk's advice. Yet away from them, without the constant danger of their intrusion, peace descended on Helen's household and her fears were lulled.

The countryside was on fire; the maple trees in the woods became flaming torches. Helen loved the brilliant autumn colors that slowly faded and died with the onset of winter. Each day the country had a new charm. November with its rain and fog spread a soft melancholy haze over the brown hills and bare trees, and coming in from the cold to her cheery living room with its books and magazines was a constant joy to Helen.

Marian came out every week and Belle came out Saturday mornings. By December Helen was noticeably stouter and her figure took on a soft fullness that was enormously becoming to her. Her eyes were clear and her skin radiant. Walter thought she was more beautiful than ever. They knew only a few people at Bound Brook and so they had few visitors. They had long quiet evenings together.

They talked or read and on mild nights walked along the black country road by the aid of Walter's flashlight. Home again, the log fire burned cheerily in the grate and Marie served hot chocolate and cookies on a brass tray. She fussed over Helen and scolded her husband in the kitchen and her forthright cheerful voice filled the house.

Helen was radiantly happy. She read voraciously and Walter came in at night always had a bag of case full of magazines and books he had picked up. He brought the evening papers and stopped at the postbox for the mail.

They did silly things too alone on the farm; dear, silly things. They played acted and with the aid of Anton, who was ingenious at such things, they got up charades and games. There was the night the portieres in the library fell down and Walter dressed himself up in them as a pirate with the brass curtain rings as earrings and the feather duster as a plume in an old hat of Marie's.

Walter grinned to himself all the way into town the next morning. On the train he made elaborate plans for that night. He'd see if he could pick up a wig somewhere. He'd be Carmen. That would make Helen laugh. . . . Must remember to stop in at the five-and-ten for some beads and stuff.

But when he got to 57th St. he changed his expression and walked gravely and somberly through the salon into Irene's office.

She grimaced at him from the phone. "Is Stella. She's going to have a kid. Yes, yes," into the phone. "I'm listening. Walter just came in. Well, for heaven's sake use your head. Fire her if you suspect her. Oh, stop dramatizing yourself! Listen, there've been millions of kids born before yours, yes, and millions after. . . . If you're sick, go home. . . . Listen, mamma and a dozen of 'em and she was behind the counter twenty-four hours later. Bah!" Irene hung up on her.

"Jerry, it seems," she explained to Walter, "has an eye for one of the girls. My advice to Stella was to fire her although, as a matter of fact, I'd rather fire Jerry!"

"So would I," Walter said. "Well, I suppose we can't now that Stella is enceinte. I suppose she just couldn't stand your wife stealing all the thunder. How is she? Mamma fired Franz at last. I've an ad in the Times today for another chauffeur. I suppose I'll be swamped with men. What are you grinning about, Walt? You look like a tomat!"

"Oh, nothing. What are you doing over Christmas? Why don't you come out to the farm?"

"No, thanks. I loathe the country in the winter. I want to go to Charlestown but Dirk's rather set on going to New Canaan with the Hon. Parents. We'll go to Charlestown, however," she added grimly. "Oh, the new waves are taking. I've got more than a dozen orders for permanents. I think it's a go, Walt. You were right that time although I didn't believe women would trust that vicious-looking apparatus, but it seems I was wrong."

Walter was gleeful. "What did I tell you! I'm going to get Dashiell to work for us if I have to pay him fifteen thousand."

"Now listen, Walter, don't be foolish. Don't let a little praise go to your head. You'll burn one woman's head off and we're ruined."

"I tell you, Irene, he's an expert. There's no chance of it. I'm going to take him on. Where's Miss Ginsberg? I want a lot of publicity on this."

"Irene shrugged. 'It's your funeral. I warn you.'"

"I'm taking the risk."

"Well, I should hope so! Only go easy. You're going to have a lot of expenses now that Helen is having a child."

"You ought to get one yourself, Irene, before you're too old," he added brutally.

She raised her eyebrows. "Oh, really. When I want your expert advice on it, I'll remember to consult you," she snapped.

"I think Stella is wise. It might give Jerry a feeling of responsibility," he said placatingly.

"There's something in that." She seemed to be thinking. "How does Helen feel?"

"Splendid."

"You're not speaking to the public now. I mean truthfully how does she feel? It's rather important."

"I'm not kidding, Irene. She feels wonderful and she looks marvelous."

"When is it due?"

"You mean the baby?"

"Certainly, stupid, what did you think I meant, the rent?"

"About the first week in March."

She shrugged her fingers nervously on the desk.

"In going to have a baby," she announced calmly.

"What? When?"

Her face broke into a triumphant smile. "In Charlestown. What you said about Jerry taking on responsibility interests me strangely. Why not Dirk? For an ideal that he felt was as big as his work at the T. B. Association he'd give the tuberculosis association up, I think. Why not a baby? That ought to be something to strive for. Our son must have the best! That means money. Our son must have the loving care of his mother. That means me! I'll have to give up here. Parker practically runs the place anyway. We'll need a nurse, doctors, large apartment, playroom, money. . . . Do you see? That means money! My Lord! Why didn't I think of it before? It's all so simple!"

"It's a dirty trick, Irene."

"What is? To present one's husband with a son?"

"No, to use it to gain your own ends."

"It's not a ninny. It'll be the best thing in the world for Dirk. This social work is in itself an expensive fad. He hasn't any right to such a luxury at my expense and now at the expense of our child." Her eyelids drooped. Her lovely eyes became dreamily seductive.

"Our child, Dirk," she whispered. Walter laughed nervously.

PAPER-DOLL CARDS ARE PLEASING AT YULETIDE

Children Delight in Receiving Such; Will Keep the Tots Busy

YOUNG AMERICA'S YEAR

Children's Xmas cards this year are good news for papa and mama. They are practically guaranteed to keep the youngsters quiet and amused for at least an hour or so.

Paper-doll cards are especially popular. One card, saying "Merry Christmas," presents a little boy and girl, with the suggestion below: "Dress Up These Dolls." The figures are semi-cut so they can be easily detached from the body of the card by a pressure of the fingers, so there is no need for scissors, while an attached envelope with in provides several costumes for each doll. Another card has a blonde paper-doll seated at the wheel of an automobile. With this card a choice of hat and coat ensembles is provided.

Educational as well as amusing are alphabet-block cards. One such card, for example, shows on the three visible sides A Merry Christmas, and arranges blocks inside to spell out "A Merry Christmas" to a Merry Little Friend.

All sorts of gay juvenile designs also appear—an engagingly plump cherub sliding down a peppermint cane; quaint pantaletted children; snow men; Noah's Ark. Then there are novelty cards such as a Jack-in-the-Box who pops up to wish you a Merry Christmas and a whole dog kennel full of amusing puppies who lift out one by one. All in all, it looks like a big year for Young America.

Tuberculosis Association and went back to John Kayle as sales manager.

The Rileys were amazed but they were not long in finding out why.

"She gained weight and spent hours lying down reading and sleeping. She never was a good sleeper, but now she couldn't get enough sleep. She adapted a languor that had a pantherlike quality to it; she who had been so nervously energetic. She was tender and passionate, clinging with Dirk. She made him to which she clung. She was careful to stage her little nausea scenes when he was at home and clung to him afterward white and shaken. She felt surprisingly well and scarcely experienced any discomfort at all except when Dirk was at home, when she struggled bravely to bear the pain without wincing."

She enveloped him in love and whenever she saw him bitter or restless she came to his side and knelt before him, her strong white arms clasped about his waist, her throat with its throbbing veins against his breast.

"My lover, my husband," she whispered, "my man!"

She went to great lengths to please him; invited his friends in and spent hours with his parents.

She smothered his resentment with her passion even before it had time to smolder. That this would eventually pall on him did not worry her. Then there would be the baby to fill him and hold him.

Irene had so carefully laid her plans that Dirk was lost before he even knew what was happening. It was exactly as she had planned it that morning with Walter. She planted the idea of a son (Irene knew it couldn't be anything else) long before she actually conceived, and she idealized it. Then she sprung on him the fact that she was to have a baby.

The rest was easy. Her health couldn't stand the excitement and worry of the Salon; nor did her health permit the upheaval of moving into a cheaper apartment or giving up the luxuries to which she was accustomed. There was doctors' fees, nurse, a nursery to be prepared. More money was needed. She even put the words into his mouth.

"We've got to have more money, Dirk."

"That will help, darling, for the time being, but what will we do when they're all sold?"

"We've got to move out of here and live more rationally. This expensive menage is totally unnecessary."

"You're right, darling, but we can't yet! Lucky she thought of it. We've got another year's lease, dear. And then if something does go wrong in childbirth—darling, I don't know that it will, but sometimes these things happen!—You'll need those bonds to turn into money quickly."

"I know it, damn it. I hate to leave ourselves unprotected."

"There are my jewels," she suggested tentatively.

"Don't be an idiot," he snapped. "Darling, don't be impatient with me. Don't worry. You'll think of a way." She kissed him, then made a path of little kisses down his face and into his neck. She clung to him, her hold stiffening; her body grew taut as steel as she pressed against him.

He caught her suddenly to him with a little groan.

"I'll have to go back to Kayle," he croaked in her perfumed hair.

"No, you don't, dear. Maybe there's another way," she whispered, her eyes gleaming. . . .

When, by an amazing coincidence, Kayle again offered Dirk his old job, this time he accepted it. If he secretly suspected Irene's fine Italian hand, he preferred not to think of it.

On Wednesday, May 29, he held his first press conference. He refused to discuss the decision of the Supreme Court, all sorts of disasters. He warned the correspondents to keep their eyes on industry over the country, in order to observe whether there would not be severe wage cuts, lengthening of hours, restoration of child labor, lowering of working standards, laying off of employees, and a general collapse in the world of industry.

The reports of the correspondents at that gathering stated that:

"The President was more sobered than many of us had seen him since he delivered his inaugural address. There were moments today when there seemed to be a note of grimness in his voice and attitude. He laughed a few times in the course of the conference, but without mirth."

Altogether, a sad and dispiriting picture.

The White House on that day announced, through its secretariat, that it was being flooded with telegrams from all sections of the country and all classes of industry, pleading for a continuation of the N. I. R. A., imploring the President not to give up the ship, for if he did the country would "go to the dogs," and economic chaos would be just around the corner.

Donald Richberg, the head of the N. R. A., issued a statement in the course of which he said:

"We now face the question of maintaining the gains which have been made in the last two years and retaining the values which have been created under the N. R. A."

General Johnson, in a radio address over the Columbia System network, Wednesday evening, May 29, predicted that there would be "strikes and turmoil from one end of this country to the other" unless something were done to offset the decision of the United States Supreme Court.

"I am no prophet of catastrophe," said General Johnson in his radio address. "This country can take it. When the worst is over our system will still stand. There may be anxious days, increasing bitterness, upheavals of all kinds, yet we shall muddle through. But it does seem a pity that somehow we cannot avoid the suffering, the heartaches, the deprivations and the despair of such incidents as this. Tonight our whole world is in confusion. The question in a million minds is 'Where do we go from here?'"

"Take to the hills! The dam has burst!"—was the general alarm which the entire "New Deal" from the President down to the last file clerk in the N. R. A., sounded to the country.

But did things happen as the Administration planned—and predicted? Did industrial and labor chaos follow the destruction of the N. R. A.? Let President Roosevelt himself answer that question. In his speech October 25, in behalf of the Mobilization of Human Needs, he said:

"I can, however, bring you good news this evening. The results of the September employment survey have just come to me from the Secretary of Labor. During that month 350,000 men and women were returned to private employment in the reporting industries of the nation, and the money in the weekly pay envelopes of those industries was $12,000,000 greater than in their weekly pay envelopes in the previous month of August."

"The September gain is the largest for any single month in the past year and a half. It brings back employment in these industries to the level of November, 1933, and it brings the payrolls back to the level of May, 1931."

"Recently I expressed the hope that private industries would strain every nerve to increase their payrolls, increase the number of those whom they employed. . . . The figures which I have cited lead me to a greater conviction that private industry is living up to my hope. We seem to be taking up the slack. Even those industries which were long backward in showing signs of recovery are putting their best foot forward."

Yet the President had the effrontery in his Charleston, S. C., speech, only two days before, to state that this recovery was due to the fact that "We planned it that way, and don't let anybody tell you differently."

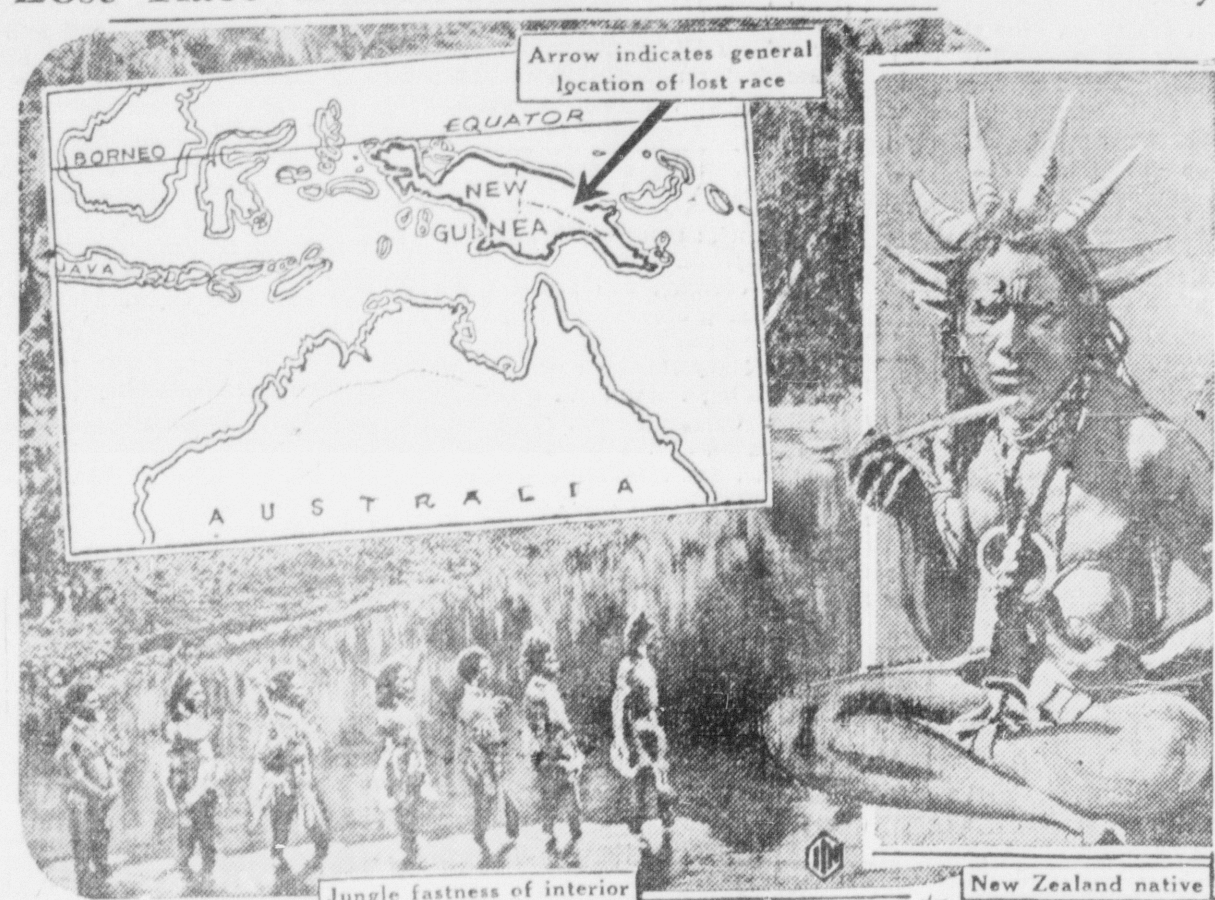

The truth is, recovery began the day of the Supreme Court's decision. The Postmaster General, and the Democratic National Chairman, and the New York Democratic State Chairman—James Aloysius Farley—who has, within the last 60 days, upon three different occasions, latched the administration wagon on to the New York ticker tape by citing the rise in the stock market as irrefutable and conclusive proof that prosperity is actually here, as a result of the "New Deal," would be interested in looking over the New York papers of Tuesday morning, May 28, 1935. They carried the Supreme Court's decision, the lamentations of the Administration leaders, and they also carried this information in headlines:

"Stocks Advance as News Comes Just at Closing. Voiding of N. R. A. Causes Satisfaction and Disposition to Buy in Wall Street."

From that day dates the rise in the stock market, which Mr. Farley now cites as evidence of the wisdom of the policies of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The next day, May 29, practically every large corporation, and many of the larger business and commercial enterprises, announced that they had

Lost Race Discovered in New Guinea Valley

Discovery of a lost race of people in an isolated valley of New Guinea adds another mysterious chapter to the hazy history of this little-known land in the South Seas off the coast of Australia. An intrepid party of Australian explorers came upon the race which apparently has been living for generations in an uncharted valley in the interior, walled off from the world by sheer cliffs which tower 7,000 feet high. Their civilization was characterized, in a report released by the Australian government, as similar to that of Europe before the Age of Iron, but distinguished by an artistry and culture of surprisingly high degree. More than 100,000 live in the colony which was believed established by some primitive race which retreated to the mountain fastness after some crushing defeat. The people are unlike the native Papuans and are brown-eyed and blond. Attempts to explore the interior have been impeded by the dense jungle growth and mountains.

no intention of cutting wages or lengthening hours of labor. Proof of their sincerity is furnished by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics. The index number representing factory employment, according to that authority, stood at 81.2 in May, 1935. It stood at 85.3 in October, 1935, the last month for which complete figures are available. Factory payrolls stood at $8.5 in May, 1935, and at $5.1 in October, 1935. The average weekly payroll stood at $21.76 in May, 1935, and $22.59 in September, 1935 (the last month for which complete figures are available). The average hours of labor per week in factories in May, 1935, was 36.3, and in September, 1935 (the last month for which figures are available) was 37.8—an increase of 1 1/2 hours per week—which is evidence of increased employment and industrial activity rather than any attempt upon the part of industry to reduce the working man to a state of slavery.

From May until the present moment, business, industry and transportation have gone steadily uphill. The table appended herewith gives the index numbers for industrial and business activity not only for May, 1935, and October, 1935, showing the increase during that period, but for purposes of comparison, it gives the index figures for July, 1933—the month before the N. R. A., the A. A. A., and all of the so-called recovery policies went into force and effect.

The figures show conclusively that following the imposition of the "New Deal" policies upon business and industry, there was a general slump. They show that in May, 1935, after 22 months of N. R. A., enacted, according to the President's statement, to bring about wide re-employment and an improvement of industrial and business conditions, business and industry were in a worse condition than before the N. I. R. A. became a law. It shows that during the five months from June 1 to October 31, 1935, there has been more progress and improvement in industry and business than there was during the entire 22 months the President's so-called "recovery program" was having its way, with the full power of the government behind it.

It shows that following the Supreme Court's decision there was not industrial and labor chaos, as the President predicted. It shows conclusively the falsity of the President's claim, made at Charleston, that the present trend of recovery is due to the planning of this Administration, but, to the contrary, it has come in spite of the plans of the present Administration and in direct contradiction of their direful prophecies last May that the outlawing of the N. R. A. would bring about a collapse of business and industry, and the beginning of a reign of economic anarchy.

Launch Battle for Deeper Channel

Philadelphia, Dec. 13.—J. Harry Lamm, first president of the newly organized Court of Philadelphia Maritime Society, launched the association's battle for a 40-foot channel for the Delaware River. General development of the channel is the principal object of the organization, which received its charter a week ago.

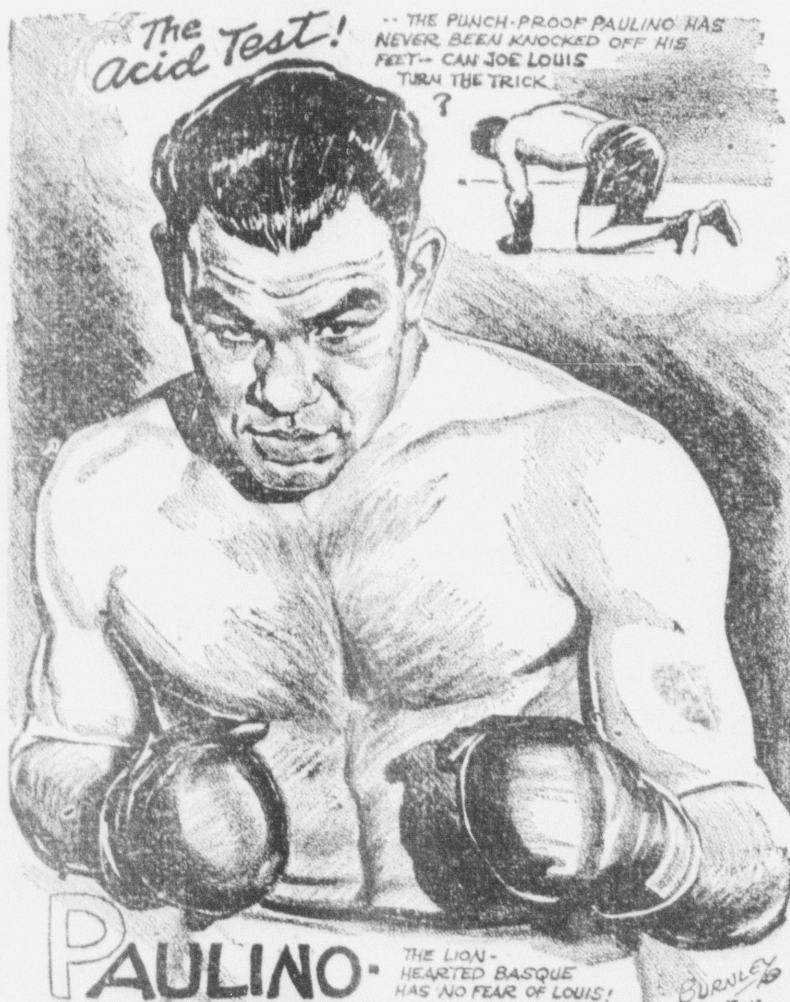

Ethiopians Raid Camp

London, Dec. 13.—Seven Italians were killed and many wounded when a troop of Ethiopians raided a camp in the hills north of Makale, Reuters reported from army headquarters at Dessye today. The Italians evacuated the camp after setting fire to huts, the Ethiopian commander said. All was quiet on the western front according to information received from Dessye.

The Tuesday evening card club met at the home of Mrs. George States. Mrs. Dyer won first prize in pinochle; Mrs. B. States, consolation.

Is Paulino Punch Proof?

By BURNLEY

Joe Louis' touted punching powers will be put to the acid test when the sepi smasher explodes his fistic T. N. T. against the iron chin of good old Paulino Uezudun, the much-chopped wood-chopper who is the modern edition of Joe Grim.

As a matter of fact, the hardy Basque has an even more remarkable record than the huggled Master Grim could ever boast of.

Iron Man Joe was supposed to be impossible to knock out when in his prime, and even the great Fitzsimmons wasn't able to put the chill on the squat Italian.

However, Grim hit the deck many a time in his jousts with the hard-hitting boys of that era; while Paulino's amazing record shows that he has never been knocked off his feet during his many years of arduous ring campaigning.

The rough, tough Basque has never dodged an opponent, and has always given his best. If the fight game had more battlers like this sincere, earnest Spanish ringman, the sport would have a much better reputation than it has at present.

Paulino will be about the first opponent Louis has faced that won't fear the Brown Bomber. The lion-hearted Basque wouldn't flinch if tossed in the pit with a pack of hungry wildcats, and he can be counted on to make Mister Louis know he has been in a fight.

$18.33. Our active payroll at present numbers 453, so that you will see that our waiting list goes back to December 13th and numbers around 1300 applicants.

"We have completed investigation of all those who applied in December and some few who applied in January so that we will have replacements to add to the payroll whenever a person receiving a pension dies or moves from the County.

"Because of the ever changing circumstances it would be too costly from the administrative point of view to investigate every applicant when we do not know when we shall have funds to help them. Also there is the possibility that in January a special session of the Legislature will be called at which time the Act governing Old Age Assistance, Blind Pensions and Mothers Assistance will be made to conform to the National Social Security Act; that will then enable Pennsylvania to receive assistance for this work from Washington.

"The reason why investigations have not been made as stated above is because of lack of funds and the inadvisability of completing investigations in the face of such changing circumstances.

"I wish to assure you that all applicants will receive every consideration in their turn as soon as funds become available.

"Very truly yours,
"FRANCES F. LOVERIN,
"Executive Secretary."

Search for Alleged Embezzler

Willow Grove, Dec. 13.—A search was instituted today for Jacob Harold Kult, 41, manager of a drug store, accused of embezzling approximately $2,000 in Christmas Club funds of Willow Grove residents.

Kult, who acted as agent for a Hatboro bank in receiving club money, disappeared from his home when the owners discovered that the Christmas checks were short the amount due them.

Must Revise Relief Program

Washington, Dec. 13.—The Roosevelt Administration must revise its present relief program or ask Congress for another two billion dollar relief fund, Senator Adams, Republican, of Colorado, declared today. Adams, who led a fight in the last session with relief experts, said that would be "the most troublesome question" before Congress next year.

Analyze Food Samples

Philadelphia, Dec. 13.—With a score of "poison pastry" victims, 150 health department chemists today began re-analyzing some 600 samples of the food for a possible bacterial organic poison.

All inorganic poisons were eliminated by chemical analysis as the possible cause of the illness among customers of a North Philadelphia bakery. Everyone of the victims was made ill after eating cream puffs, eclairs and Boston cream pie.

COUNTERFEITING CENTS!

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 13.—(INS)—A hard working counterfeiter is hunted here by city and provincial authorities as a flood of bogus pennies began streaming through banks. The spurious large Canadian one-cent coins are exact reproductions of the genuine except that they are but one-half the legal thickness. Why anyone should select the one-cent piece for counterfeiting is beyond local police, who pointed out that hundreds of the coins would have to be passed daily to show any sizeable return to the counterfeiter.

Twenty-five cents a day! What a small price to pay in order to secure tenants for your vacant house! Let the Courier "For Rent" ads. work for you.—(Advertisement.)

MOST men know that their wives have sound and expert opinions on merchandise. Even the husband who would never admit his need for advice usually tries to ferret out her views, wishes and hopes before buying.

Why? Because most women seems to have an inborn interest in new things and better ways. . . . They are curious and alert. . . . They ask their friends about this and about that. . . . They compare values with great care. . . . They read the advertisements eagerly for the latest news

It pays to keep ahead, by keeping up with advertising. Well-known products are definitely better products—if not, they couldn't be advertised month after month and year after year. NATION WARNED OF SHORTAGE OF WAR NECESSITIES

10 Essentials U. S. Would Have to Find Substitutes For In Event of Blockade Told

By Kenneth T. Downs

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Dec. 13—If a strangling war should strike the United States, blockading the nation's ports, the country would lack ten essential war materials, warning was given in a report to the American Chemical Society.

These materials were listed by H. A. Kuhn, executive officer of the Chicago Chemical Welfare Procurement District, as antimony, chromium, manganese, mercury, mica, nickel, rubber, tin, tungsten and wool.

In the emergency of a blockade, Kuhn said after an exhaustive survey of preparedness needs, chemists would have to develop new alloys and suitable substitutes for rubber, wool and other indispensable commodities.

"Due to the small size of our peace time army and lack of war reserves, it would be necessary to mobilize our industry for war before we could mobilize our man-power," he said.

"Although we are probably more self-sufficient in regard to raw materials needed by industry than any other nation, we still would lack an adequate supply of essential items in the event of a blockade of our shores.

"In peace time we import still other items which are needed in war. Among these are camphor, coconut shells, coffee, hides, iodine, jute, malay fiber, nux vomica, opium, shellac, silk, sisal, and sugar.

"Although we have substitutes for some of these items, important for civilian and military use, getting an adequate supply of them will be primarily the job of the chemist and of the chemical industry.

"Such development as synthetic camphor, rubber, benzol, toluol, naphthalene, ethyl alcohol, menthanol, phenol, improved rayon, a domestic supply of iodine, a non-mercurial iodinate, and new alloys have added to our national defense.

"The chemist and the chemical industry would be the backbone of our Army in a major war."

RELIGIOUS CARDS FOR CHRISTMAS POPULAR

Many Choose Those Which Draw Inspiration From Deeper Significance

VARIETY IS VERY WIDE

Cards which draw their inspiration from the deeper spiritual significance of Christmas appear in increased numbers this year. In fact, it seems to be smart to be religious as well as sentimental in your card selections.

In wide variety there are exquisite cathedral etchings and water-colors, jewel-toned designs of mediaeval suggestion, including famous Madonnas. Also there are some modern treatments of the Madonna and Child and other Biblical themes. One Madonna and Child card is executed in soft grays and silver, with silver foil applied crown. Another is done in sepia on a background of white satin. Still another Madonna and Child is presented in the smart new color combination of brown, yellow and gold.

The Child and Lamb motif is a particular favorite, appearing in numerous versions—wood block prints in the Durer manner; silhouetted quaintly in white against star-studded turquoise blue; or in water-color effect on parchment. The Star of Bethlehem also appears frequently in new and striking designs, as, for example, centered in a gray booklet-cover in a monotone radiation of grays and white.

Cards patterned after the old-time illuminated parchment scrolls are newly popular, with old English type and rich-hued coloring of initial letters, they express Biblical verses or couch their greetings in a formally reverent style.

WEATHERMEN HIT NEW HIGH AVERAGE IN DAILY FORECASTS

Advances in Meteorology Taking the Guesswork Out of All—Important Daily Reports

By Robert McGill
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(INS)—Perhaps it is the first thing you read in your newspaper. Or you may hear it over the radio, or see it tacked up on the bulletin board of the old county house. Then, again, you may subscribe to it.

But regardless of where you see it or how you come in contact with it, it represents the labor of one of the most—if not the most—co-operative organizations of the government. It embodies a co-operation that extends to the four corners of the world and has no regard for country, race, or political creed.

I'm talking about that little weather report and all the rest of the weather reports and bulletins prepared by the weather bureau of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

To some of us the weather report has become such a part of our daily life that we are apt to belittle or overlook its significance. But whether you depend upon it consciously or unconsciously it plays a big part in the scheme of things. And to thousands of persons it is the all-important service of the Government—outside of government itself.

The reports almost control the movement of the greater part of our commerce—air, land and sea. Many times throughout the year they save lives and property with warnings of approaching hurricanes, cyclones, forest fires, sudden changes in temperature, blizzards, electrical storms, etc. In addition, they are the "bible" as far as the farmer is concerned, and on them depend largely, the success of their crops, and, in many instances, the life or death of live stock.

These reports, regardless of how you get them, or how much attention you give them, are prepared by an army of scientists scattered all over the world. Most of them have never seen each other but they work in the closest kind of harmony and co-operation for the good of the world.

The United States maintains its principal weather bureau in Washington. William R. Gregg is chief of the bureau. It is his job to supervise the functions of some 4,500 stations throughout the United States and its possessions. This in addition to the hundreds of reports to and from foreign countries.

The department functions 24 hours a day every day and they hit it on the head most of the time. Of course the bureau may go wrong occasionally on a local thunderstorm and spoil the family picnic or the golf game, but, on the whole, the weather man strikes a pretty good average.

Several years ago this batting average might not have been so good, but today, the established science of meteorology, augmented by other sciences, give the weather man a good degree of accuracy.

Especially is this true of the Department's records for the past year, ended in June. The department hung up a record for efficiency, taking into consideration of course, the co-operation afforded by the foreign services, and commercial organizations in this country who volunteered service.

The result of this co-operation, Gregg said, was more adequate service in such special fields as farming, aviation, shipping, and forestry.

Exchange of observations among countries, principally by radio, but also by cable and telegraph, is the most important feature of international co-operation, according to Gregg. Twice a day, 11 a. m., and 11 p. m. EST, about 100 reports on weather conditions in North America and over the western Atlantic ocean are sent out directly from the weather bureau in Washington. These reports reach European meteorological stations through transmitters of the Navy radio stations at Arlington and Annapolis. Twice a day, 5 a. m., and 5 p. m. EST, about 100 European land station observations and reports from ships in the eastern Atlantic are broadcast from the Rugby wireless station in England.

Last year the meteorological service at the 10 airway forecast centers was strengthened by consolidating the meteorological and communications services of the weather bureau and the bureau of air commerce. Four weather maps a day, one every six hours, covering eight hours in advance, and special forecasts, when conditions warrant, became the regular airway program.

Among other improvements made, was the transfer of the hurricane warning service from Washington to the South Atlantic and Gulf coast. Special teletype machines now connect 10 stations with the headquarters at Jacksonville, Florida, and New Orleans, Louisiana. During tropical storms the service of these stations is continuous.

The flood forecasting service profited by the use of river stage recording instruments constructed with funds allotted by PWA. New installations of recording rain gauges for other agencies interested in rainfall data helped weather bureau flood forecasters in their efforts to devise a method for determining the exact height and time of arrival of a coming flood.

Primarily for the benefit of trans-Pacific air routes to the Philippines and Australia, research on marine meteorology was centered in the tropical Pacific. Weather bureau officials, Gregg said, predict that they will soon establish an almost fool-proof system for co-operation with the growing air traffic over the Pacific. Heretofore, he said, the service has been temporary to accommodate only the principal and pioneer flights.

APPLES ARE STAPLE, ABUNDANT, CHEAP; COUNTERACT ACIDS

By Rhondana A. Armstrong
Home Economics Representative

Here in Pennsylvania apples are perhaps our most staple, abundant and cheapest fruit.

We esteem apples for food value. Apples are largely composed of starch which changes to sugar as the fruit ripens. This sugar gives a moderate amount of heat and energy. The building material, calcium and phosphorus, found in the average apple is small while the iron is fair.

The chief food value of this fruit lies in its vitamin content. Vitamin C is very abundant, while a good supply of Vitamin B and a fair supply of vitamin A can be relied upon.

Raw apples are especially high in vitamin C and when the skins are eaten on a mild roughage is furnished to the diet. Apples, because they are base forming, help to counteract the acid foods and thereby aid in keeping the body in a neutral state as it should be for good health.

Apples may be prepared in many ways. The following recipes are submitted to apple lovers:

Apple on a Stick
½ cup sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
¾ cup water
Combine and cook until the brittle stage.

Red coloring—few drops
Red apples—12
Skewers—12
Flavoring oil—few drops
Add coloring and coloring.
Method: Purchase wooden skewers from the butcher. Wash and dry apples, insert skewers. Dip apples quickly into the above mixture and twist so that the syrup runs down smoothly. Place on a rack or vase to cool. Before dipping, syrup should be removed from the fire and kept in boiling water so it will not thicken. Use apples the same day for best results.

Apple Cornmeal Mush
2 cups cooked cornmeal
1 cup finely chopped tart apples
Method: Mix well and pour into a bread pan to cool. Slice and fry in bacon fat. Bacon is nice served with this.

Baked Honey Applesauce
6 large tart apples
¾ cup honey
¾ cup water
Method: Wash, dry, core and slice apples. Place in greased baking dish. Pour over honey and water. Bake in a slow oven for one hour.

HEALTH OFFICIAL SAYS FUMIGATION FUTILE

Quarantine Only Means of Preventing Spread of Contagious Diseases

STOPPED 10 YEARS AGO

HARRISBURG, Dec. 13.—More than ten years ago the State Department of Health learned the futility of closing schools and fumigating class rooms after discovery of a contagious disease among the pupils or teachers.

Despite this discovery a decade ago complaints are still received daily by the department from parents of school children who believe the schools should be closed and the rooms fumigated. Although much has been said and written on this subject many people apparently believe that fumigation will prevent the spread of a contagious disease in a class room.

"My attention has been brought to the number of letters being received more or less constantly during the school year from parents of school children demanding that schools be closed and the rooms fumigated when communicable disease has manifested itself," remarked Dr. Edith MacBride-Dexter, Secretary of Health, today.

"There is no scientific basis for these procedures. The Department of Health rejected them more than ten years ago and a number of years prior to that time discontinued fumigation in homes.

"Contagious disease in schoolrooms is not spread by way of inanimate objects. There is no infection in the atmosphere. The only way to contract conditions such as scarlet fever and other childhood diseases is by contact of the infectious with susceptibles.

"The closing of a school room or school building by no means breaks up the contact possibilities. In fact it only transfers them from a supervised school room to the unsupervised street, movie or store.

"Moreover, missed mild cases are not easily detected when supervision in the school room no longer exists. On the other hand, absentees from school can be identified, followed up, the cause for the absence learned and, if contagious illness exists, the cause can be quickly isolated and quarantined.

"Therefore it can positively be stated that nothing is to be gained by closing schools and fumigating them. On the contrary, much can be lost."

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Now you know, and I know, that when a man escorts a gal out places, of an evening, he simply ought to dress up. It's etiquette. But you also know—and oh, how well you know it—that lots of men simply won't do it.

The command to don tuxedo or white will bring agonized squawks even from men so mild they don't fuss when their wives use their razors or hide their favorite pipes.

Now comes a break for you gals cursed with husbands—or boy friends—like that. Because the informal supper dress has come into its own—and what an own!

Never before this season have I seen such a variety of lovely dresses . . . dresses styled to go places after five o'clock with a man in a business suit. They come in tailored types, shirtmakers, frocks with sporty detail. They come in many lengths, from street-length down to instep. 'And they come in more frilly feminine styles, in every material from sheer chiffon to the heavier velvets and metal cloths. Some of them can do "double duty," being backless, but having their own jackets.

In Hollywood, the girls who are stocking up their wardrobes with the new frocks . . . call them bar, cocktail, supper, Sunday night dresses or what you will . . . are legion.

Martha Tibbetts, who plays in "Ceiling Zero," has one in black satin—a street length dress with draped top, the collar trailing off into two floating satin scarves caught on the side with rhinestone clips.

Marie Wilson, appearing in "Colleen," wears velvet for such occasions. Black velvet, fashioned into a simple frock with lapels and V neckline filled in with rhinestone mesh. For this, her accessories are a black velvet halo hat, a pair of silver foxes, and long white gloves augmenting the draped, three-quarter sleeves.

Black, again, with rhinestones, has been chosen by Glenda Farrell, for a cocktail frock of wool crepe, floor length, with neck interest high-lighted by cut-out shoulders and a V-shaped brilliant clip at the throat. Her hat, for this, is a black felt halo beret on a wide ribbon band, set back off the face to reveal an inch or so of honey-colored hair.

Anita Louise, with a penchant for dainty, soft feminine clothes, dines regally in dull gray chiffon, floor-length with a flare below the knees, sparkling buttons all down the front, and double-puffed sleeves shirred clear to the high neckline, raglan style. This, by the way, is a Studio Style that can be purchased in your own city.

Black crepe contrasted with a deep white bib collar, and an off-face cap like a Dutch girl's, pleases Patricia Ellis' fancy, and she alternates it with light shaded crepe, simply cut with a single side drape, and a huge bouquet of flowers from yellow to deep reddish brown perched on one shoulder. Louise Fazenda trims her blue-and-gray striped frock of imported material with gray fur shoulder epaulets . . . and so it goes . . .

Stop fussing at hubby, now . . . and buy one of the new supper frocks for dashing informality.

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — I've "preached practicality" until I'm sick of it.

So this is the only place you're going to find the words "practical," "conservative," "wearable" and "un-theatrical" in this article. I'm taking a day off today. For today only, I'm going to write about nothing but clothes that are mad, delightful, extreme, exaggerated and—expensive. Clothes that—if I didn't despise the word so much when used in connection with fashions—could be described as "amusing."

If you aren't interested, go listen to the radio—or bake a pie. Otherwise, haul up a chair and prepare to be dazzled. For you're going to hear about some of the picture stars' maddest moments. They must have been mad . . . when they broke down and bought these little numbers . . . because they're the kind you wear a few times, gleefully, and tire of very suddenly. Impractical for service . . . but wonderful for that bored feeling.

There was Joan Blondell. Joan, all at once blossomed out into the clothes-conscious class, has a new suit. Flared gray wool skirt. Cutaway jacket, in gray nubby tweed. Pinch-back waistline . . . jacket slashed way up in front, and dropping way down in back . . . Prince Albertish, only full . . . and she wears it with the giddiest of black accessories.

Anita Louise fell for a silvery metal moire costume coat for evening. Deep stiffened cuffs and turned-down collar accent the military note brought out by padded frocks across the chest . . . yet the wrap is ultra-feminine and iavish from its trailing, floor-sweeping skirt. One mudpuddle on a rainy night, and it finished . . . but it's lovely while it lasts.

Then there's the case of Simone Simon, the French gal. She astounded nightspotter recently with a shimmering powder blue velvet gown giving off a silvery effect . . . the front of the skirt tucked clear to her knees, mind you, with the cut-up U-effect swooping clear to a train in back. This spectacular dress she wore with a brown mink cape . . . and it stopped traffic. Perhaps only a Parisienne would have the nerve!

A model done for the fashion show in "Colleen" goes Napoleonic, with a long tan wool dress trimmed with covered buttons, brown silk braid around lapels, and skirt to the floor flared below the knees. With it go a white stock, a long mink stole to the knees . . . and a brown, board, high-fronted Napoleonic hat! A costume in which to make an entrance . . . but never to be selected if you have to watch the budget.

They're fun . . . these new, mad, fantastic styles . . . and are prescribed, if you have the poise to carry them off, by Old Dr. Kelly for refreshment purposes only . . . not for a steady diet!

EDDINGTON

Mr. and Mrs. George Bischoff spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hopkins, Germantown.

Miss Dorothy Best was a dinner guest of Miss Dorothy Fitch, Sunday. On Sunday the Eddington Presbyterian Church honored the 400th anniversary of the printed English Bible. New Bibles were placed in the pews by the Session. The Rev. Sargis presented the Session with a new Bible for the pulpit in honor of his first year as minister of the Church. William George, Philadelphia, a brother of the Rev. Sargis, rendered a solo.

RANGERS SHATTER RECORD OF MOOSE

By T. M. Juno

The large crowd of basketball fans which packed the Italian Mutual Aid hall last night was treated to one of the most exciting games played in this vicinity for many years as the Third Ward Rangers and the Moose clashed in the night-cap of the St. Ann's-Hibernians tilt. The fray had thrills galore from start to finish and had the spectators in hysterics all night. After forty minutes of fast basketball, the Moose's winning streak of four straight games was shattered by the Rangers by the one-point score of 22-21. The defeat upset the league standing to a point where the Moose are holding on to the lead with their finger-tips.

Again it was that nemesis to all leading clubs, Bud Tulio, who checked in with the victory for the Rangers. Several weeks ago when the Odd Fellows were in a deadlock for first place, Tulio was fouled in last 39 seconds of the tilt. He made the shot to bring victory to the warders, 29-28. Last night, history repeated itself although in a more exciting form.

Until last night, the Moose had captured all of its scheduled tilts. The Rangers fought them toe to toe and never failed to allow the Moose any open shots. With the result that with ten seconds to go the score was evened up and Herbe Lawrence was detecting pushing Tulio. But the husky Third Ward center seemed best under fire and with all the intensity that surrounded him easily made the shot which gave the Pikers the one-point victory.

Tulio made the winning foul shot but it was an under the basket shot that changed the entire complexion of the embroil. This came with but thirty seconds left to play and the Moose holding a two-point lead. Morgan, seeing that he was cornered on an attempted shot from side court, passed the ball between his legs to "Pete" Borrice who was directly under the basket. Borrice was hemmed in and could not dribble to get a set shot but lish on the sphere made the field goal which helped to make victory possible. leaped up and by putting a little "Eddie" Dugan made the most thrilling shot of the night late in the final period. His team was leading at the time, 19-18. Dugan took a pass from David and began to dribble at a fast speed with Watts in close pursuit. Neither could stop when they were close to the net but Dugan tried an over-the-head shot just as Watts plowed into him, spilling both. The ball hit the backboard and bounced through the cords for the field goal which seemed to put the game on ice until the Third Ward spurt in less than a minute to play.

"Joie" Roe was high scorer for the losers with three field goals and two fouls. Bud Tulio and Pete Borrice were high scorers for the winners with Tommy Watts playing a fine defensive game.

Larry David made the first score of the fray for the Moose when he was fouled in the opening minute of the game by Borrice and made good on the conversation. The lead was short-lived, however, for Watts made a pivot field goal and the Pikers were in the lead, 2-1. Taking a pass from Lawrence, Joe Roe scored under the net, giving the Moose the lead, 3-2. Green made the count 6-2 by a field goal and a foul. Joe Roe gave the Moose another point by making a foul try when hooked by Lawler. But Lawler retaliated at the whistle by sinking a double-decker and was fouled while doing it. He also converted the try to make the score at the first quarter, 7-5, with the Moose in the lead.

"Henny" Morgan stepped into the picture at the beginning of the session and with a one-handed side throw scored the field goal which deadlocked the score. Joe Roe broke the tie with a foul. Lawrence increased the Moose lead with a long shot and when Dugan made a foul the score stood 11-7 at half-time with the Moose still on the long end.

The third quarter started fast with Borrice taking a pass from Watts to score. Lawler was fouled by Roe and when he sank the try, the count was 11-10. Dugan gave the Moose two points, retrieving the ball after Lawrence missed. Morgan again cut into the Radcliffe street boys' lead by hitting the cords for a two-pointer. Tulio was fouled by Lawrence under the basket and he converted both tries to put the Rangers in the lead, 14-13. However, just before the third quarter whistle blew, Joe Roe took a pass from Green and gave the Moose a 15-14 lead.

Tulio on a pass from Watts on the pivot play scored for Third Ward and again gave them the lead at the beginning of the final period. Lawrence was fouled under the basket and made good on both tries to change the lead to the Moose's side. But Tulio not to be outdone sank one in from beyond the fifteen foot mark to put the Pikers ahead, 18-17. Joe Roe took a pass from David and scored and for the fifth time since the period started the lead changed. Ed Dugan on a hard shot scored for the Moose to give them a three point edge. Borrice was fouled by David and made the shot. On a short pass by Morgan, Borrice scored on a difficult play and again the teams were tied at 21-21. Tulio when fouled by Lawrence scored the winning point.

BOOK TACONY ALL-STARS FOR BATTLE WITH "RECS"

All efforts for a game between the Andalusia eleven and the Bristol Recs having fallen through, due to the fact that the A. A. A. management considers the locals too fast for them, Manager "Eddie" McDevitt has booked the strong Tacony All-Stars for Sunday, at Leedom's field.

On Sunday, December 22nd, the Recs will meet the Langhorne Aces at Leedom's field, and will close their season on Christmas Day.

If arrangements can be completed, and a good team secured, the Christmas game will in all probability be a charity game.

ST. ANN'S DROPS FOURTH STRAIGHT GAME HERE

Leading most of the game, the St. Ann's A. A. quintet faltered in the last period and as a result dropped its fourth straight game of the Bristol Amateur Basketball League last night before the largest crowd of the season in the Italian Mutual Aid hall. The victors were the Hibernians with the final count being 27-26.

It was a field goal from beyond the center mark of the court by "Lefty" Flack that counted the winning points for the Hibs. Flack's double-decker came after "Izzy" Kanter had put the Saints in the lead, 26-25 with but one minute left to play. On the tap-off the ball bounded to Flack who picked it up and without getting set let go of the sphere from beyond the thirty-foot mark. The ball went through the net without touching the rim and gave the Hibernians the victory.

Although the edge never changed until the final session, the Hibs were always on the tail of the Purple and Gold and kept nagging at the lead. Both teams played in flashes scoring four points at intervals. It was the shooting of Kanter which kept the Saints in the game while Johnny Gallagher and Unkie Gallagher were the sharp-shooters for the winners.

Gallagher helped to put the Hibs in the game in the third quarter when he hit the cords for a long shot and followed with a twin-pointer from the side. These double-deckers deadlocked the count but not for long for "Johnny" Dougherty sank in a short one and was fouled by Nicols while doing it. He made good on the conversion and the Hibs had a three point lead. The foul also proved disastrous for the Wood streets because it was the fourth call on Nicols who was playing a wonderful defensive game. Accordi replaced him.

Mortimer shaved down the Hibs' frontage by two points when he shot one in from side court and "Joie" Seneca, playing his first game of basketball in league competition was fouled by Cummings. Seneca made good on the try and again the count was tied. Kanter put the Saints in the lead but a foul by Dougherty and a field by Flack was enough for the Big Green to annex the win.

Monday night, Third Ward will play the Young Men's Association and the Hibs play the Odd Fellows.
